I can't afford tuition this term, can anyone help

STUDENT

I'm sorry to hear you're struggling. The University offers several financial aid options that might help. You can explore grants like the Federal Pell Grant, State Opportunity Grant, and University Tuition Grant, which are based on financial need and don't require repayment. The PathwayState program provides full tuition and fees for eligible state residents. Make sure to complete the FAFSA as soon as possible to determine your eligibility. For personalized assistance, contact the Office of Student Financial Aid and Scholarships. They can provide guidance and explore options tailored to your situation.

I'm sorry to hear you're feeling this way. It's important to know that support is available. You can contact Counseling Services at 555-346-3227 to schedule an appointment for individual or group therapy. They offer both in-person and virtual sessions. If you need immediate support, this number also connects you to a 24-hour crisis line. Remember, you're not alone, and there are people ready to help you through this.

If you do not pay your bill by the due date, a financial obligation hold will be placed on your account. The financial obligation hold will, among other things:

1. Prevent future registration (add/drop).
2. Prevent access to the transit card and Recreation Center.

Unpaid balances may eventually be sent to a collections agency.
